FORMAL WELCOME AT BELLEVILLE ST.

Lord and Lady Willingdon Pay Visit to Oak Bay Links—Dine With Administrator

A ROUND of golf at Oak Bay and dinner as the guests of Chief Justice J. A. Macdonald, Administrator of British Columbia, and Mrs. Macdonald, were the final incidents in the busy first day spent by the Governor-General and Lady Willingdon on the occasion of their present visit to Vancouver Island.

Their Excellencies left the boat at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, after being welcomed by Mr. A. M. D. Fairbairn, secretary to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor. Another welcome awaited them when they came ashore, the group including Chief Justice Macdonald, the Administrator of British Columbia, Hon. R. H. Pooley, acting Premier; Mayor Ancom: Lieutenant-Commander L. W. Murray, senior naval officer at Esquimalt; Brigadier-General J. Sutherland Brown, G.O.C.; Mr. H. D. Twigg, M.P.P., and Major Selden Humphreys and Captain Hobart Molson, aides to the Lieutenant-Governor. Greetings were cordial and informal, but occupied only a brief time, during which a number of photographers took pictures. The distinguished visitors were driven at once to the Empress Hotel, where they were met by Mr. J. K. Hodges, the assistant manager, and Miss Lynch, social hostess, and conducted over the new wing. ## Civil Servants Ask for Inquiry Into Salaries

OTTAWA, April 3.—A large delegation representing the Civil Service Federation of Canada waited upon Hon. Fernand Rinfret, Secretary of State, today and urged the Government to establish a commission, similar to the Beatty Commission, to further inquire into the entire public service with a view to salary adjustments so that the present rates will be brought to standard. The delegation stressed that there should be no change in the method of promotions. "We would respectfully urge that no change in the promotion system be made which would eliminate the competitive principle so necessary to efficiency and contentment throughout the service," the memorandum said.

Mr. Baldwin Voices Faith In Future of Industry in Britain and Lauds Miners

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, April 3.—The British miner is second to none in the world and, given a period of peace, confidence and the revival of trade, none need fear for the ultimate future of the British coal industry, declared the Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin in ringing tones in the House of Commons today. The occasion of the Conservative Leader's expression of faith was in the final stage of the Coal Mines Bill, which passed third reading by a vote of 345 to 277.

STIMULATE PATRIOTISM IN SCHOOLS

Department of Education Proposes to Publish Special Magazine for Pupils

MINISTER OUTLINES DETAILS OF PROJECT

The Department of Education will publish this year a school magazine to be used for supplementary reading purposes in all the public schools in British Columbia, Hon. Josiah Hinchliffe, Minister of Education, announced yesterday. The new magazine, which will contain sixteen pages, will be issued every two months, commencing in September next, there being five issues each year. There will be publications of the periodical for the junior, intermediate and senior grades of the public schools in the province. This is the first time that the educational department will distribute such a magazine for instruction of children in the schools. Fifteen years ago the department published a magazine, but it dealt mainly with the administration of the School Act. Such magazines as Mr. Hinchliffe now proposes to have distributed for regular use in the schools in the province have been in vogue in some of the Australian States and in New Zealand, where the practice has proved of great success, and of considerable benefit to the children. ## Rancher's Team Plunges in Ice Covered River

QUESNEL, April 3.—Joe Canton, Quessnel River rancher, lost a good team of horses, harness and contents of a wagon, which included medicine for his sick wife, when the animals plunged through the ice above ten feet of swift-running water near the ferry crossing, seven miles upstream from the mouth of the Quessnel River. The wagon was later recovered. The horses had bolted when Canton alighted from the wagon to remove his overcoat. Canton was returning from a thirty-five-mile trip to summon Dr. G. R. Baker, who was following in another rig.

MME. ALBANI GREAT SINGER PASSES AWAY

Beautiful Songstress of Nineteenth Century and World Famous Called by Death

WAS RENOWNED FOR HER WORK IN OPERA

LONDON, April 3.—Madame Emma Albani, a famous operatic soprano of the nineteenth century, died at her home in Kensington this afternoon at the age of seventy-seven.

She had been ill only a week but had not ventured out of the house for some months although otherwise she was as active as ever. She remained cheerful to the end and her interest in life generally, and particularly in the operatic and concert world, continued unabated.

Madame Albani had a soprano voice which was applauded by thousands on every continent. She took leading roles at Covent Garden and Charming Queen Victoria at Windsor Castle. She was made a Dame of the British Empire in 1925 and was awarded orders of merit by Denmark and Germany.

She was born at Chambray, near Montreal, and much of her talent was ascribed to her father, Joseph Lejeune, a musician, organist and harpist, who taught her from childhood. As she grew older the fame of her voice spread to the United States and she was invited to sing in the Catholic Cathedral in Albany, N.Y. The congregation was so impressed by her voice that she was invited to sing in the cathedral in Milan. She made her operatic debut in Italy in 1879, after which her success became meteoric.

She married Ernest Gye, impresario, in 1888. Her farewell concert was given in Albert Hall, London, in 1911.

Madame Albani, who ranked as one of the great sopranos of the last century, was born on November 1, 1853, in the little village of Chambray.

German Cabinet Sustained, But Its Position Is Still Shaky

By OTTO BROOK
(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service.)

BERLIN, Germany, April 3.—Chancellor Heinrich Brüning's Cabinet won its first decisive victory today when the Socialists' motion for a vote of no confidence was defeated with the considerable majority of 252 to 182 votes. This imminent dissolution of the Reichstag is prevented.

The Parliamentary situation was thoroughly confused until a few hours before the voting. An uncertain factor in the division was the right wing of Alfred Hugenberg's Nationalist party, which wanted to oppose the Government, whereas the left wing favored the new Cabinet. Hugenberg was finally defeated after long debate, and in order to save his party from a split he had to yield to the moderate elements. This is supposed to be the greatest defeat ever suffered by the newspaper magnate as a party leader.

Although the Cabinet has won its first Parliamentary fight, its position seems to be insecure owing to its dependence on violent partisans like Hugenberg.

First steps towards new Government emergency laws for agriculture in Eastern Germany are being speedily urged by President Hindenburg. In covering the budget deficit the new Government will follow the policy of the previous Müller Cabinet. Whether the tax-lowering programme desired by the new coalition parties succeeds seems to be extremely doubtful, because the agricultural programme of the new Government necessitates further heavy expenses.

Prince of Wales Decides to Come Home by Air

KHARTOUM, Sudan, April 3.—The Prince of Wales, who has been hunting in the Lott country, has decided to return by air from his safari to the base steamer Ondurman at Juba. Flight Lieutenant Bowen Boscarlet, of the 47th Bombing Squadron, stationed here, who has been appointed pilot to the Prince for the projected flight from here to Cairo, will leave tomorrow for the Lott to pick up the Prince and bring him back to the steamer.

IRISH LABOR IS LOYAL TO MR. COSGRAVE

Unanimity of President's Election Is Surprise to Political Circles of Country

RATHER UNION HELP THAN U.S. CADGING

By WILLIAM H. BRAYDEN
(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service.)

DUBLIN, Ireland, April 3.—The Daily's decision at midnight last night to re-elect William T. Cosgrave to the Presidency (which it did by a vote of 80 to 65) was universally anticipated, but nobody foresaw the complete unanimity with which all parties would combine to reject the Republican leader, Eamon de Valera.

There are six parties in the Dail, and De Valera received no vote except from his own supporters. Many deputies outside his party upheld some of De Valera's economic views.

PARTIES ACCEPT TREATY
The opposition to him is due to the fundamental difference that all the other parties accept the treaty with Great Britain, while Mr. De Valera holds out for a republican settlement. He is accused of trying to attract voters by promising the Free State Parliament as without legitimate authority and of recognizing a rival authority outside the Dail.

Mr. De Valera's future depends on his inducing the electors to reopen the controversy with Great Britain. The general election cannot be postponed beyond 1932, and President Cosgrave can now choose his own date. It is not likely to be soon for the last election is not yet paid for.

Under proportional representation, election results must show numerous parties, and Mr. De Valera's failure to attract voters means that he will be unable to secure a sufficient number to create a bigger party than Mr. Cosgrave's.

NO ALLY IN LABOR
Mr. De Valera needs a clear majority of the whole House, or, roughly, a 50 per cent increase over the present number.

MANSLAUGHTER IS VERDICT IN ASSIZE COURT

Recommendation to Mercy Is Made by Jury Which Finds Henry Plater Guilty

DRIVER ACCUSED OF NEGLIGENCE

"Guilty of manslaughter, with a recommendation to mercy," was the verdict brought in last evening by the Assize jury in the trial of Henry Plater. The prisoner was remanded for sentence until the end of the assizes, by Mr. Justice Murphy.

Preliminary to the resumption of the hearing yesterday afternoon, Judge, jury and court officials visited the scene of the accident, the jury having expressed, through their foreman, the opinion that this would enable them to follow the evidence more intelligently. At the place of the collision the road crosses diagonally a creek bed, the bottom of which is about eight feet below the surface of the road. To build the road the creek bed has been filled in between two retaining walls, each almost vertical. Between the sixteen-foot strip of bluish pavement and the edge of the retaining wall is a strip of gravel-surfaced road three or four feet wide. Any car going off the highway would immediately drop over the retaining wall. The Indian car had gone over where the wall

PARLEY HALT NOW CAUSED OVER FRANCE

Three-Power Pact Appears Practical Now That Japan Has Accepted Terms of Treaty

FRENCH DIFFICULTY REMAINING INTACT

Guarantee of Security Still Involves Important Issue Between Britain and France

(Associated Press)

LONDON, April 3.—Complete satisfaction of Great Britain, the United States and Japan over their three-power naval construction agreement served today to veil to some extent the Anglo-French-Italian political problems which still delay complete success of the conference.

The committee of British, American and Japanese experts named yesterday needed only a one-hour session this morning to accept the Japanese reservations in principle and tomorrow will meet again to work out the details.

JAPAN'S REQUESTS

These include the Japanese request that she be permitted to keep her deckyard and technical staffs by accelerating the construction of her naval programme, in compensation for which she wishes to scrap some ships before their allotted span of life.

Under the agreement, Japan, in the next seven years, will build less than 20,000 tons of cruisers, no submarines and a small number of destroyers. A subcommittee appointed today will determine whether, in the scope of the agreement, Japanese shipbuilding can be increased within that period.

Thus while the three-power success of the London conference today becomes a reality, there was a lull in the negotiations to satisfy French desires for another security formula and Italian aspirations for agreement.

Coal Mines Bill Is Passed Only By Liberal Aid

LONDON, April 3.—The Government's Coal Mines Bill, which has been one of the most contentious measures in recent times, passed on third reading in the House of Commons tonight, a motion for rejection being defeated 277 to 234.

The measure now goes to the House of Lords.

The Government's majority in the House of Commons compares with the majority of eight on second reading, and the Liberal party refrained from voting, in accordance with the recent decision not to embarrass the Government during the naval conference. One Liberal, however, voted with the Government, while four others stood with the Conservative opposition.

Libel Action Is Brought to End With an Apology

VANCOUVER, April 3.—The action for libel brought by David Kirkwood, janitor at the courthouse, against Rev. Duncan McDougall, editor of a local weekly, came to a sudden conclusion this afternoon, when the case was settled by mutual agreement.

Mr. McDougall, stating that he had acted on misinformation unwittingly, expressed his regrets to Mr. Kirkwood. Counsel for the parties concerned conferred with Mr. Justice W. A. MacDonald and the announcement of the settlement followed. Mr. McDougall was charged with publishing a defamatory libel in the publication, The Beacon, on November 5, 1929, concerning Mr. Kirkwood.

Transmit Front Page of Paper Over 2,500 Miles by Radio Means

(Associated Press)

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., April 3.—The complete front page of a newspaper has been transmitted across the country by radio for the first time. Giving the present a peek into what may be accomplished in the future, engineers of the General Electric Company today reported that successful experimentation had permitted them to read the first page of The San Francisco Call-Bulletin three hours after it had left the press. It was reproduced in full size in the laboratory by a new type automatic carbon recorder, connected to short-wave receiving equipment actuated by signals originating 2,500 miles away.

The recording machine was developed by Mr. Charles J. Young, son of Mr. Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric, who, in an address several years ago, said he hoped to live to see the front page of The London Times "flashed with a zip" into New York City.

The recorder can be attached to any radio receiver much the same as a loudspeaker. It prints on a roll of paper which moves through the machine at about one-half inch a minute. In this test short waves were used so that there would be no interference with broadcast programmes.

Naval Men Lay Protest Before Emperor and Propose to Start Nationwide Agitation

By W. W. FLEISHER
(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service.)

TOKIO, Japan, April 3.—Admiral Kanji Kato, chief of the Japanese naval staff, in an audience with Emperor Hirohito, has personally submitted a direct memorial protest against the Government's cabled instructions to Reijiro Wakatsuki, head of the Japanese delegation to the London Naval Conference, approving the American compromise.

In Japan the chiefs of the military and naval staffs are invested with authority to present direct memorials on important military affairs independently of the Cabinet, but seldom use the privilege. Following the reception, Admiral Kato declared, "There is decidedly no change in the policy of the naval staff, which refuses to consent to the American proposals, as the naval

Wanted Man Taken After Long Trail

(Canadian Press)
PORT ARTHUR, Ont., April 3.—Ontario provincial police spurned the speeding plane and turned back to the old reliable dog team—and today had "got their man." David Brinton, wanted for alleged theft of a $1,000 bale of furs from a Hudson's Bay Company post at Red Lake, Ont., was captured this morning, according to a report from Constable Albert Erickson.

Last Friday the constable set out on the trail of Brinton, who was moving with his dog team over the snowy trail between Red Lake and Hudson, Ont., a ninety-five-mile stretch. For three days the policeman used a Western Canada Airways plane to scour the intervening country, but yesterday he reported from Hudson that the plane had been abandoned.

Today, Erickson reported that he overtook Brinton on the trail. The wanted man was sleeping in camp, and the missing furs were nearby in perfect condition. The constable did not mention in his report where the arrest was made nor how the trails converged. But officials here believe that Erickson chartered a dog-team and overtook Brinton between Red Lake and the Manitoba boundary.

Brinton, who was wanted for the theft of a $1,000 bale of furs from a Hudson's Bay Company post at Red Lake, Ont., was captured this morning, according to a report from Constable Albert Erickson.

SEEN BY POLICE

Running outside with the money in his hands, Luby was seen by Sergeant A. A. Campbell, of the Hollywood Police Station, who made a flying tackle at the robber but missed getting into his car. Luby fired several shots at the officer and drove away.

A passing police prowler car picked up Campbell and sped down Hollywood Boulevard, a busy main thoroughfare, in pursuit of the fleeing Luby. Shots were exchanged until the robber car took to the side streets and managed to disappear.

The officers started to comb the foothill streets to the north and were joined by another policeman. They found the robber's car partly hidden in the brush bordering the Hollywood Mountains and soon after stirred up the fugitive. Shots were exchanged again and Luby then ran to a nearby residence, jumped into a small truck and fled down Vermont Avenue toward Los Angeles.

AFTER BLOOD CHASE

Leaving Brown behind them, Campbell and the other officer, Sergeant Zed Gruzy, jumped into their own car and followed. After a wild chase the police drew alongside the truck and the robber stopped, shouting, "I surrender. You got me!" As the officers alighted, however, Luby drew his gun. Campbell then fired, the bullet piercing Luby's heart.

NO AID FOR UNEMPLOYED BY CABINET

Premier King Persists in Attitude Matter Is for Provincial, Not Federal, Governments

WILL NOT GIVE AID TO "TORY" RIDINGS

Hon. R. B. Bennett Confronts Premier With His "Vicious Principle" Speech in House

OTTAWA, April 3.—Unemployment insurance engaged the attention of the House of Commons when the debate, initiated on Monday, was resumed today by Mr. C. R. McIntosh (Liberal, North Battleford), on unemployment.

On Monday last, said Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in his speech, he had moved the House into committee of supply, but Mr. Heaps had moved an amendment requesting the Government to act in the matter of unemployment. The House was far from united as to what was in Mr. Heaps's mind. One phase that had been emphasized was that unemployment was a national problem. He didn't think this could be questioned, but a great deal depended on what inference would be drawn from it. If it meant a national problem to the exclusion of the provinces and municipalities, then the point could not be admitted.

IMPORTANT SUBJECT

Recognizing the unemployment situation, the Prime Minister said, the Government was aware of the importance of the subject. "But," he said, "I do not feel that the Federal Government is called upon to contribute towards something which falls under the jurisdiction of the provinces."

The debate had taken two trends, he said. One was that there was an emergency demanding that there should be an immediate contribution to unemployment relief. There was no evidence of an urgent condition

BANDIT SHOT WHEN FLYING FROM POLICE

Had Held Up Bank Teller and Was Caught in Act of Leaving Building With His Loot

GUN BATTLE ENDED WITH HIS DEATH

(Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES, April 3.—A robber, identified by police fingerprint records as Joseph Luby, twenty-seven, a gangster wanted in Detroit for a double slaying, was shot and killed today fifteen minutes after he had robbed a Hollywood bank of $500.

The man drove up in an automobile in front of the bank, left his motor running and went inside. He poked a revolver at a teller and seized $500 in bills.

Running outside with the money in his hands, Luby was seen by Sergeant A. A. Campbell, of the Hollywood Police Station, who made a flying tackle at the robber but missed getting into his car. Luby fired several shots at the officer and drove away.

Mr. C. W. Busk Was Engineer on Section Between Chemainus and Nanaimo

PREPARED PLANS FOR POINT ELLICE BRIDGE

Reminiscences of the construction of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway, and of Victoria in the middle eighties are recalled by Mr. Charles W. Busk, of Balfour, who is staying at the Strathcona Hotel.

Mr. Busk, who came out in the early eighties to join the Canadian Pacific Railway engineering work, then under construction on the Prairies, was associated with the section of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway between Chemainus and Nanaimo, during construction in 1888. Much bridge work was then necessary in that portion of the line, which has long since been replaced by fills, in fact the highest trestle north of Duncan then occupied an elevation across an arm of the Gulf south of Ladysmith. The principal bridge built on this section was the crossing on the Nanaimo River, still one of the most picturesque views on the railway, where the steel span occupies the site of a wooden bridge.

"Everything was very primitive then," said Mr. Busk to The Colonist, in a chat last evening, as he told of the organization of supplies, and the prosecution of the undertaking for the Dunsmuir bridge.

Mr. Busk left just before the railway was opened to traffic, and established an engineering practice in Victoria. He drew plans for the Point Ellice Bridge when tenders were invited for the Government—a bridge opened in August, 1888—in which his plans were based on the strict standard of the London & Northwestern Railway, where he had been trained in the Old Country, to be submitted on behalf of one of the contractors. Later he learned that his design, while praised, had too much steel in it. He thinks that perhaps if it had been erected the terrible tragedy of 1896 on the site might never have occurred.

Mr. Busk engaged in surveying and engineering work on the Island and in the Nelson area for many years. Of late he has turned to fruit farming in the Balfour district of Kootenay.

VIVISECTION CALLED BLAT ON HUMANITY

Doctor Says Vivisectionists and Pathologists Contribute No Benefits to Civilization

ANIMALS LOOK TO MAN FOR PROTECTION

"Vivisection is the greatest cruelty afflicting humanity and a blot upon civilization," said Mr. Ernest Fewster, M.D., of Vancouver, who addressed the members of the local Anti-vivisection Society at the ninth anniversary celebration in the New Temple last evening.

"People speak of the horrors of war," he said. "They are right; but wars are fought because of ideas; and who has ever heard of a vivisectionist striving for an idea? The gifts of the vivisectionists and the pathologists to medicine and surgery are absolutely negligible."

"The speaker said he knew a number of them. The vivisectionists never cared 'a hang' about humanity. They were men who liked to practice cruelty, which was the makeup of their minds; and they enjoyed the sight of living things squirming through pain. Such human beings are possessed of an unholy spirit, and still retain something of the satanic instinct."

"The pathologists are almost as bad," he averred. They had no real interest in humanity. Their only interest was in disease; but they would not mind helping humanity, provided it was accidental. The pathologist was very much overpaid, and a real cure of any consequence can be traced to pathology. The pathologist was not a medical man, and was not entitled to the title he assumed.

In the economy of the universe, man is no more important than a guinea pig, so why cut up an animal to get another year of life. Man's inhumanity to animals was mainly the result of the teachings of Christianity. We are told that every animal was made for man's use, and we grew to look upon ourselves as lords of creation. Other things did not matter, so why worry about little things like torture and cruelty?"

"The age is an age of machinery," said Dr. Fewster, "even in medicine. Man is tested by this machine and that machine nowadays. There is now very little of the honest endeavor to discover what is fundamentally wrong with the suffering patient."

Dr. Fewster referred to the "blindness of physicians" and vivisection as a "sin" and had to have doctors about him, the prayer "God Save the King" was most appropriate and necessary.

"Animals look to man for protection. It would be well to extend some of the much-vaunted brotherhood of man to the lesser animals of the world and abolish vivisection, which was a sin against the soul," said the speaker.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. David Leeming, who had a pleasant duty to perform during the evening, presenting Miss Dora Killo, secretary of the society, with a beautiful basket of flowers as a small token of appreciation for the work she is doing on behalf of anti-vivisection. Acknowledging the receipt of the flowers, Miss Killo stated that an anonymous donor had sent the society $500 worth of Victory bonds, and that Mr. George Arliss had forwarded a cheque for $50 in payment of life memberships for himself and Mrs. Arliss.

his present strength. Labor was once a possible ally of Mr. de Valera's, when Mr. Jinks' mysterious disappearance saved Mr. Cosgrave from defeat by a Labor-De Valera combination. But Labor is now De Valera's bitterest opponent and the angriest passage in the debate last night were between De Valera's men and the Laborites.

Labor was taunted with receiving subsidies from the English trade unions, and Labor's reply was that if it were forced to choose between accepting help from fellow trade unionists in Great Britain and cadging a guest, notified the police at 10:50 o'clock that she had discovered his empty car on Dallas Road, close to the sea wall, and asked that they investigate. Constable Woodburn and Driver Atkinson responded and located the body.

Dr. E. C. Hart, city coroner, was notified and authorized the removal of the body to the B.C. Funeral Parlors, where it is expected an inquest will be held.

If you know of someone who is troubled with catarrhal drainage, head noise or any other ailment, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily require constitutional treatment.

Lady Willingdon Will Be Guest Of Club Today

LADY Willingdon will be the guest of honor of the Women's Canadian Club at tea this afternoon at the Empress Hotel. Her Excellency is to arrive at 4:30 o'clock and will be received by Mrs. P. B. Scourrah, the president, and other members of the executive. There will be a short musical programme during tea, the soloist to be Miss Merle North, who will be accompanied at the piano by Miss Lenore Brumpton. The Empress Hotel orchestra will also give a number of selections.

Will Be Sent Into Peace River Area

The Peace River District of British Columbia will be developed into an important dairy country, according to plans which have been launched by the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

Under arrangements announced yesterday, Hon. William Atkinson, Minister of Agriculture, who is now on the Prairies, will tentatively select substantial herds of purebred cattle which will be sent to the Peace River, and sold to settlers there on easy terms over a long period.

Legislation passed by the British Columbia Legislature recently at Mr. Atkinson's request, makes this scheme possible. The minister is empowered by this means to sell cattle to settlers through the Land Settlement Board, and finance these transactions on the credit of the Government.

A creamery at Pouce Coupe makes possible a large expansion in the butter output as soon as dairy herds are built up. To wait for the natural increase of the present herds would be to hold up development of the country seriously, Mr. Atkinson believes.

The Peace River settlers have asked for some 300 milch cows, but probably the Department of Agriculture will not care to ship so many at first. About half that number likely will be supplied for the present.

After Mr. Atkinson has investigated the supplies of dairy animals on the Prairies, experts of his department will be sent there to choose the individual animals which will be shipped north in the next few weeks.

SOCIAL SERVICE JOINS HOSPITAL

Local Organization Hopes to Include Medical Assistance in Effort to Help Community

Of the many varied activities which present themselves to the social service worker, the connection between the hospital and social service seems to offer the widest field for endeavor through the interdependence of medical and social service work.

The Social Service League, Victoria, is very hopeful of the expansion locally of this form of service, which seems to make for ideal constructive medical and social work when, while teaching and learning from each other they are united in serving the patient and the community.

Since physical disability is found to be the underlying cause of most of the social problems to be solved, the lessening of disease is of the utmost importance, not only for health and comfort, but for economic welfare and social progress. Doctors have been handicapped for years in the successful treatment of their patients by the circumstances of these patients' lives. Living conditions within their homes, occupational aggravations, unhealthy surroundings or unsuitable employment, which may militate against the advised treatment, have tended to make the efforts of medical men very difficult, and at times more or less futile.

It has become a recognized fact that the physician and the social worker must go hand in hand in very many cases, if the treatment prescribed is to have permanent appreciable results. For this reason there is a vast field for the social worker in conjunction with hospitals. For many years a great number of the London hospitals have had the services of the lady almoner, one of experience and knowledge in social problems and their satisfactory solution, one who understanding fully the deprivations and wretchedness to which so many of the patients are subject in their daily lives, can through her contact with various social agencies, assist in lightening, if not entirely dispelling, these adverse conditions.

In some cases patients leaving hospitals are given the benefit of a sojourn in a cheerful convalescent home, for the depression and weakness following upon an illness is difficult to shake off, and strength which returns slowly at best, can scarcely be regained in an atmosphere of anxiety and want. The members of the medical profession cannot follow up the patients who visit their clinics or hospitals, they can but advise and prescribe, and here again the social worker may make it possible for these patients to obtain the needed medicines, the actual cost of which may equal or exceed the sum of a day's provisions for a poor family. The effects of tonics and remedies, be they ever so good, may be greatly lessened by the state of mind existing upon unfavorable conditions, and the social worker may be of inestimable aid to the doctor in giving him an insight into the causes of the various ills he is called upon to diagnose and to treat. Much valuable social service hospital work has been accomplished in the United States, notably in the State of Massachusetts. In Montreal and Toronto this field is well equipped also.

As well as a good attendance of members, there were many others present who had come to witness the planting of the tree in memory of Mrs. Vine, that sturdy pioneer whose indefatigable labors have made history for the district and the province. Mrs. M. E. McVicker, the president of the institute, welcomed the guests. There were more than eighty, not counting children, among whom were four granddaughters of Mrs. Vine, four great-grandchildren, three great-great-grandchildren, and five great-great-great-grandchildren; Mrs. Mary Cooper, a native daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Peatt; well-known pioneers of the district. Gordon, president of the Provincial Institute; Mr. John Hosie, who represented the British Columbia Historical Association; Mr. Fawkes, representing the Department of Agriculture, and many other well-known residents. The president read a biographical sketch of Mrs. Vine, which stirred the imagination of all and the memories of many, telling how splendidly and courageously this woman "carried on," fearing neither man nor beast, inspiring respect and not a little awe, and at times hatred. Mrs. M. C. Gandy, a granddaughter of Mrs. Vine, moved a vote of thanks to the institute and particularly to Mr. and Mrs. Fergus Reid for their generous hospitality. The memorial tree, a red hawthorn, was planted with due ceremony by Walter and Noel Parker, great-great-great-grandsons of Mrs. Vine, and afterwards tea was served. ## POTTERY CLASS WORK ATTRACTS

Among the most interesting exhibits of the night school classes held recently was that of the pottery class which attracted a large number of visitors during the evening. Mrs. Grupe, who is in charge of this work, has the happy teaching gift of letting each student express his own ideas; consequently there was no repetition of design or monotony of subject in the exhibit, which was remarkable in the excellence of work attained by first-year students.

A pair of book ends modeled and glazed by Miss Amy Adamson were really exquisite. These showed a swan-like bird rising from a bed of flowers in pastel colors and displayed genuine talent. Miss Adamson also showed tiles of original design.

Among the more advanced pupils Mrs. R. O. Combe's work stood out by reason of its good workmanship. A beautifully shaped lamp base made by her with well-designed decoration in relief-work was much admired.

One of the most interesting features of the exhibit was that it hinted the possibility of the use of local material. Many of the glazes used this year have been made from formulae worked out in the city, whereas in former years they had to be imported from England. In this connection was noted a large well-shaped vase made by Olga Hart from clay obtained from her Summer home at Deep Cove.

The convener will be Mrs. Teasdale and Mrs. Barrowclough, who will be pleased to receive applications for tables. Tea guests will be welcomed. The educational secretary, Mrs. E. C. Hayward, gave an interesting and detailed report of the educational work of the Municipal Chapter during the past year, and received the congratulations of the chapter on her election as Municipal educational secretary. The report of the annual meeting of the Municipal Chapter was also given and a graceful note of thanks received from the Municipal regent, Mrs. Heiden Gillespie for the satisfactory arrangements made by the chapter for the occasion. A charming letter was read from Mrs. C. deV. Schofield, honorary regent of the chapter, written from Cristobal, Canal Zone, describing that part of the voyage and thanking the chapter for good wishes sent to the bishop and herself for their journey. Miss McMullen gave a report of the meeting of the Girl Guides, and the travelers' aid report was read. Mrs. R. B. McMicking was appointed the chapter's delegate to the Provincial meeting to be held in Victoria this month, and Mrs. Curtis delegate to the national annual meeting to be held in Montreal in May. FRANCE TO CELEBRATE
France is making active preparations for the celebration this year of its great literary centenary. One of the features will be the revival of Hugo's "Hernani," whose appearance a century ago is considered by many to be the deciding point in the romanticism over the classics. It is expected that the interest awakened in the romance will bring out also a number of books and criticisms of the work of the men who contributed to the new school. It is predicted that the revival of Hugo's plays will be not only in France but in other European countries as well.

SIR FRANCIS YOUNGHUSBAND TELLS OF FAMOUS MISSION TO TIBET

Treaty Negotiations Were Protracted at Lhasa During the Year 1903

How friendly relations came to be established between the British and the Tibetans was related by the man who brought about this state of affairs, Sir Francis Younghusband, K.C.B.I., C.I.E., at a luncheon meeting of the Montreal Women's Canadian Club. Sir Francis, in 1903, was charged by Lord Curzon, then Viceroy of India, with a mission to Tibet, which, at that time, though carrying on correspondence with Russia, was returning letters from Lord Curzon and maintaining what the lecturer termed a wall of obstruction. Permission to undertake this mission was not obtained until November, at a season of the year when it was generally held impossible to cross the Himalayas. Sir Francis, however, has explored the various passes in winter as well as at other times, and felt confident of getting through.

The intense cold, eighteen below zero, encountered one morning, after the Indian troops had passed through the beautiful, though forested district of Sikkim, wrought great hardships, as there was no fuel carried, and no shelter but tents. Even the oil in some of the rifles and one of the two machine guns was frozen. When the mountains were crossed, the force had to camp in the open, knowing that an army of Tibetans three times their number were near at hand.

Sir Francis told of setting out with his interpreter, Captain O'Connor, for a party at the Tibetan camp. They rode fourteen miles unarmed and with no escort, but were received in friendly fashion by two generals, whom the speaker described as arrayed in silken gowns and wearing "pork-pie" hats adorned with peacock feathers. At the other end of the room, however, were three lamas, sent down, he said, to curse him for a week. Opposition did not lie with the officers, but with the priests, the speaker remarked.

He had explained to the generals that matters were one-sided, in that Tibetans could come to India and the British, but the British could not come to Tibet. The generals replied that the matter could not be discussed, under orders from Lhasa, and Sir Francis' claims could not even be reported to Lhasa. When told he must go back to India with his troops, he had replied that if he did so, the King would cut off his head. Sir Francis was then convinced that the only way to deal with the matter was to go straight to Lhasa and see the principal lamas, and convince them that there was no desire to break down the religion of the country.

MARCHED THROUGH LHASA
Further incidents were described. Finally orders were received from India to proceed to Lhasa. The brilliance of the scene as the Indian troops neared the city, where the great castle's golden roof glittered in the sunlight, was recalled. Presently the Lord Chamberlain came with a letter from the Grand Lama, and also a gift of beautiful brocade. Sir Francis was warned on pain of death not to come to the city. Later he had a visit from the Chinese Resident, and there arose the question of returning the visit. It was decided to go through Lhasa rather than around the wall, and the party donned full dress uniform, got together a band, and with the Union Jack flying, marched through Lhasa, returning the same way, and creating a rather dramatic effect. A draft copy of the treaty it was hoped to make was left with the Chinese Resident. The Grand Lama had by this time gone into seclusion for three years of contemplation, and his great seat was left with his regent. The work of persuading the individuals of the National Assembly and the officials was carried on patiently, but though some appeared convinced, none would commit himself. A favorable impression was made by the splendid behaviour of the Indian troops through all this time. Sir Francis said, as the Tibetans had expected looting and massacre.

After a year of persuasive effort, a gathering was held in the residence of the Chinese Resident, and the ultimatum was given that the treaty must be accepted within a week or force would be used. Sir Francis insisted it must be signed in the Grand Lama's palace. The final ceremony of affixing the various seals was carried out with the utmost goodwill.

SOUVENIR OF MISSION
Sir Francis Younghusband exhibited to the audience a small figure of Buddha presented to him by the regent of the Grand Lama. The Tibetans are as stubborn in friendship as in enmity, he said, adding that during the Great War the Grand Lama of Tibet wrote to the Viceroy of India offering a thousand Tibetans to fight in France with the British forces, and telling him that throughout the country the lamas would be praying for the success of the British arms.

Today the Grand Lama's palace is connected with the Indian frontier by telephone.

CANADIAN CLUB HEARS MESSAGE FROM GOVERNOR

Viscount Willingdon Addresses Large Gathering at Empress Hotel Luncheon

CANADA'S PLACE IN EMPIRE DESCRIBED

"I am not much of a believer in the bringing about of a world peace by means of pacts and conferences," said His Excellency Viscount Willingdon, Governor-General of Canada, in speaking to some four hundred members of the Canadian Club, who gathered for yesterday's luncheon meeting in the Empress Hotel. "It is only by educating our people that this country can get away from the horrors of war." His Excellency continued.

Viscount Willingdon said that it was always a pleasure to himself and to Lady Willingdon to find themselves back in Victoria, at the same time recalling that Victoria was the first city in Canada in which he had been made a freeman. Speaking of his recent visit to Friendly Bay, His Excellency said that he had been presented with a token pole, which was a friendly, but rather formidable gift, inasmuch as it would cost at least $800 to transport this trophy to Ottawa.

REMOVAL UNDESIRABLE

"In any case," continued His Excellency, "I think that it is undesirable that any of these historic landmarks should be taken away from the places to which they rightly belong."

Speaking of a dinner, given in London by the Canada Club some years ago, His Excellency said that after three and a half years of office as Governor-General at Ottawa, he found himself sounder, mentally and physically, than when he had first left England for Canada.

"From Halifax to Vancouver," he continued, "I see signs of development, and the thing which always surprises me about our country is that, with our comparatively small population, we have risen to the dignity of the fifth trading nation in the world."

CANADA IS LOYAL

Canada, continued His Excellency, is as loyal as true and as true as any other part of the British Empire. Nevertheless it was true that she was now a separate entity, independent in the administration of her international affairs.

"The Crown," said Viscount

Willingdon, "is the only tie—call it a sentimental tie if you like—which binds Canada to the British Empire. I ask you, is this any reason why Canadians should not get together and co-operate in business affairs? In any case I am quite certain that this will come to pass in the near future."

"These ideas, which I have given you this afternoon, will, I hope, make you realize that Canada has not only established her position in the British Empire, but has also shown her importance in the discussion of world affairs."

VISION OF FUTURE

"As I look to the future, as I sometimes do, I see this Dominion as a leader in the affairs of the world. That is my vision of the British Empire in the future. Canada has a great destiny to fulfill in the years to come, and there is no doubt in my own mind that she will come up to scratch."

Don Joshua Hinchliffe, Minister of Education, in moving a formal vote of thanks, regretted the unavoidable absence of Premier Turning to His Excellency, he said, "You have given us a manifestation of those bonds which bind us to the Empire, and have shown us Empire visions, which we, from our restricted point of observation, can never understand."

GUIDE SAYS WOMEN
TENDERFEET BEHAVE
BETTER THAN MALES

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 3.—The winner of Foxhall Village, which is an exclusive residential district in Washington's suburbs, are planning themselves a bit because Howard O'Hagan, ex-governor of the Canadian National Railways staff in New York City, told the Foxhall Citizens' Association that a lady was better behaved on the trail than a gentleman.

Giving a talk before the association and several members of the American Nature Association, Mr. O'Hagan described his experiences as a guide on hunting expeditions on the borders of Jasper Park and expressed a preference for the conduct of women tenderfeet. He explained that a city-bred man or a man of small acquaintance with woodcraft and riding poses along precipitous trails, always supposed that he was capable of correcting his guide's errors, if any. The consequence was there were disagreements, not to say perilous moments, when harmony was necessary to a quick decision. A woman, he continued, was willing to concede her ignorance of procedure and placed complete confidence in her guide.

WHAT SHE OBJECTED TO

They met at the dance. He was looking very sad.

"Why did Jane break off the engagement?" she asked, knowing that was what he was worrying about. "Because I stole a kiss," he replied.

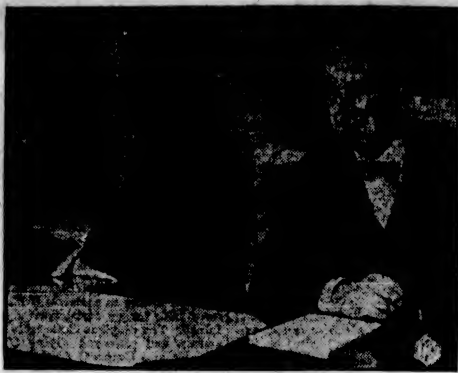

"That all?" she cried in amazement.

"Yes, and it was only in fun, too," he murmured.

"But surely Jane wouldn't object to that?" she asked.

"That's what I thought," he returned unapologetically. "But the trouble is, well, I stole it from another girl."

Ambassador to the U.S.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

Dipper Has a Good Meal

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The whole world has a new appeal When you've enjoyed a hearty meal.—Dipper the Grebe.

When Dipper the Grebe came down on the Green Meadows because he simply couldn't make those wings of his take another stroke, he was in despair. Had Mrs. Quack been in his place, or Mr. Quack either for that matter, the case would not have seemed so hopeless. You see, Ducks can waddle. They can travel quite a distance on those webbed feet of theirs. But a Grebe's legs are so short that he can waddle a few feet and then pitch forward. A Grebe wasn't intended for travelling on land.

"Dear me!" thought Dipper. "Whatever shall I do now? If my poor wings had only held out just a little longer, I should have reached the Big River. Now I'll starve to death before I can get there. Indeed, I doubt if I could get there even if I didn't starve. I guess it's all up with me. Some hungry person will surely find me and that will be the end of me."

Dipper lay right where he fell for a long time. In fact, he was right there when Flip the Terrier discovered him. Of course, Flip was tremendously excited and he barked as if he would bark his head off. Dipper didn't like that barking. He was afraid. Oh, yes, Dipper was afraid. He didn't know what sort of a creature Flip was, but he did know that he was big enough to be dangerous. But, even though he was afraid, Dipper had no intention of giving up without a fight for his life just as long as there was any life to fight for. And then came that two-legged creature, which you know was Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy picked Dipper up. Dipper struck at him two or three times. Then he was quiet. Somehow, there was something very soothing about the touch of Farmer Brown's Boy's hand. Dipper was terribly frightened. Of course, he wouldn't be so terribly frightened if a great giant picked you up and carried you off? Just the same, Dipper couldn't help but feel that he might be a whole lot worse off, in fact, he suspected that, had he remained unfound on the Green Meadows, it would have been a lot worse for him than being carried off by Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy whistled as he carried Dipper up to the house. He took him inside and showed him to Mother Brown. Then he put some water in a tub and he put Dipper. Right away Dipper began to feel better. He felt quite at home in the water. But he couldn't get out of the tub. He was just as much a prisoner in that tub of water as if he had been locked in a cage. You see, he couldn't fly out, because he couldn't get going enough to rise out of the water. He couldn't jump out, because his legs were too short.

Farmer Brown's Boy took a net and went back to the Smiling Pool. There was a certain open space there where Farmer Brown's Boy was certain he could catch some minnows. He knew that Dipper needed food and that nothing would taste as good to him as fish. When he returned he had a pailful of minnows. He dropped one in the tub where Dipper was. There was an exciting minute and then that minnow disappeared headfirst down the throat of Dipper. Two more followed. Dipper's eyes had brightened. He looked almost happy. As a matter of fact he was almost happy.

"I guess matters are not as bad as I thought they were," said Dipper to himself. "This is the first time I ever had fish without the trouble of catching them."

PSALMS THE FIRST CHOICE OF POET

Head List for J. C. Powys' Library If Alone on Desert Island

(Special to The Colonist, Copyright, 1930)

TORONTO, April 3.—John Cowper Powys, poet, essayist and novelist, awarded the palm of honor to King David's Psalms when he spoke before a large audience at the last week, naming his selection of the ten books he would recommend for the library of a man condemned to live alone on a desert island.

The other nine books of the writer's choice were: Homer's "Iliad," Aeschylus' "Prometheus," Horace's "Odes," Dante's "Inferno," Don Quixote, Shakespeare's "King Lear," Goethe's "Faust," "The Idiot," by Dostoevsky, and Marcel Proust's fifteen volumes. Mr. Powys ruled out politics, science and philosophy in his selection.

"Style and style alone makes a book eligible for the list of the ten best," said the lecturer. "I would choose books that satisfy every one of our human instincts, the sensual, emotional, pure intellect and the egotistic instinct."

The speaker suggested to his audience that they live a double life. "Treat society with ironical submission," he said, "but sink down into yourself and your ten best books, which must partake of the nature of a confessional—an immortal dialogue."

The cocksure young man who once visited the Uffizi Gallery in Florence, said to the curator: "Are these your masterpieces? I don't see much in them myself!"

"Sir," replied the curator, "the pictures are not on their trial. It is the visitors who are being tested."

BUILDING TRADE HAS ACTIVE YEAR

Engineering Projects Exceed All Others in Interest Shown in Structures

Considerable progress is again recorded in the building activities of the Dominion during the calendar year 1929. According to a report by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the value of the building projects authorized by sixty-one cities during the past year was greater than in any other since statistics were first officially compiled in 1920. The aggregate for 1929 amounted to $234,944,549, compared with $219,106,715 in 1928; $184,613,742 in 1927; $166,386,607 in 1926, and $125,029,367 in 1925. These totals are based upon revised figures supplied by civic officials.

The index number of wholesale prices of building materials, calculated by the Bureau of Statistics upon the 1929 average as 100, averaged 90 in 1929, compared with 98.1

in 1928 and 84.1 in 1927, when prices were lower than in any of the seven preceding years. The index number of wages in the building trades averaged 115.5 in 1929, compared with 185.6 in 1928 and 179.3 in 1927. The 1913 figures are the base, equal to 100, upon which the latter indexes are computed.

The noteworthy increase in construction was also reflected in the index number of employment in building, based upon returns from some 600 contractors employing an average payroll of $1,851 persons. This index, based upon the average employment in 1926 as 100, averaged 136.3 compared with 112 in 1928. Last year's mean was the highest since the record was first made in 1920.

The activity in building had, of course, a stimulating effect upon the industries related to construction, as for instance, lumber, clay, glass and stone, as well as constructional iron and steel work, in which employment was at a considerably higher level than in previous years. According to The MacLean Building Review for January last, the value of the contracts awarded throughout Canada was $576,651,800 in 1929, compared with

Salada Orange Pekoe has by far the finest flavour

$472,032,600 in 1928, an increase of 22.1 per cent. An analysis of the value of contracts awarded according to the intended use of the buildings to be erected, shows that there were slight declines, as compared with 1928, in the contracts given for business, industrial and residential building, while there was a large increase in those for engineering projects.

What is Kraft "CAVE-CURED" Cheese?

In the cool, deep, wind-blown caves of Southern France, many years ago, the piquant rare flavor of "cave-cured" cheese was first produced.

There subtle variations of moisture and changing temperatures assisted nature in her unhurried task of perfecting the time-mellowed "cave-cured" cheese that became the delight of epicures the world over.

Now, in Canada, cheese lovers are offered this rare treat! For Kraft has recreated the ideal conditions of the famous caves of Southern France and Kraft "Cave-Cured" Cheese is now available to everyone, everywhere.

The process or operation of controlling load ratio consists of changing of the voltage ratio of a transformer without interrupting the load, and although it is often referred to as "tap changing under load," modern load ratio equipment, in shifting from one tap to another, carries no load by the contact used, the current having been interrupted on the operating sequence of the equipment by a circuit breaker before the load is shifted. Contacts begin, So declared Mr. C. E. Sisson, M.E.T.C., engineer of the Davenport works, Toronto, of the Canadian General Electric Company, address, 1000 University Avenue, Engineering Institute of Canada at Montreal. Speaking on "Transformer Load Ratio Control" Mr. Sisson described the equipment for load ratio transformer.

line and the division of wattless current. Here, while these two quantities may be separately controlled by the field, they cannot be simultaneously regulated. Engineers are therefore satisfied with field control of line power factor or voltage, or of both voltages ignoring the power factor and one voltage for the other. Alternatively, to introduce some means of controlling the field control. This is accomplished by insuring some ratio between the two quantities, such as the division of wattless current, leaving the voltage control to the bus. By this means, the power factor may be increased, eliminated or reversed at will in order to secure the best operating conditions, insuring the best voltage formation in the tie line is equivalent, in effect on the flow of reactive power, to raising or lowering the voltage on the other systems. This scheme can be extended to any number of stations operating on a common tie line. The one voltage control equipment need mean there are stations. It is possible to maintain the bus voltage at all stations at the desired current in any part of

If parallel lines of different characteristics or high voltage loops exist, however, a new problem presents itself, in the solution of which the same type of equipment can be

Obviously, carrying a load on the tap connection would involve a destructive short circuit between those taps under suitable impedance was introduced. It limited the exchange current to include such an impedance in the form of a leakage reactor in the form of a leakage reactor in the form of a separate transformer core or of a separate iron core reactor.

Following an outline of the more critical details of load ratio control, Mr. Slason concluded with an outline of the features which must be given careful consideration in determining upon standard equipment for apparatus control. These were: (a) as possible, standardization of apparatus should be selected; (b) apparatus should be selected so as to provide as wide a range of application as possible with a minimum amount of detailed changes; the equipment should be simple of operation and suitable for either hand or remote control. With these objects in mind, the main equipment consists of: (1) motor-driven taps; (2) raters; (3) connectors to the taps; and (4) emitter gear for operating these devices; two cam-operated oil-actuated contractors, and a motor-driven mechanism.

THE TEST-HOUSE BOY

The young fellow you see here is called the "test-house boy." His job is to collect samples of the gasoline and oils running through every still in the Imperial refinery at Sarnia and bring these samples to be tested. Others like him are at work in each of the six great refineries which Imperial has built across Canada.

The "test-house boy" goes back fifty years to the days when Imperial Oil was a new company producing chiefly kerosene for oil lamps. Its effort then was to make a kerosene that was pure, clean and safe to use. The "test-house" was the place where these qualities were proven.

The old test-house is now a chain of laboratories but the principle of perfection which the test-house boy represents has not changed. Just as the kerosene had to be perfect before Imperial would sell it, so the gasoline and motor oils which Imperial makes today must pass a standard of perfection before they leave the refinery.

That is why people have learned to trust Imperial Oil products and that is why Imperial has grown from a few hundred men in one small refinery to more than nine thousand men—serving every corner of Canada—ranging the world from the Arctic to Colombia and Peru—striving constantly for new achievement.

Marvelube is Imperial's finest motor oil.
Imperial 3-Star and Imperial Ethyl are its best gasolines.
Which means that nothing finer can be put in your car.

DECLARES JEWS FORCE MOSLEMS OUT

Sitting on a lounge in his headquarters at a small hotel in the heart of the city, the Grand Mufti, a man of middle years with flowing black robes, the Grand Mufti assured The Chicago Daily News correspondent that while the Government commission's report just published was "not without merits," the situation in Palestine was eminently fair in most respects, particularly on the land question and immigration. It did not touch the future of the Jewish people.

"Real adjustment of the racial differences between the Jews and Arabs," the Grand Mufti said, "can only be achieved by giving Palestine self-government based upon the principle of representation for all populations. That is the simple and honest solution, if the British care

Under Turkish rule there were accusations of repression against the Ottoman court. Under the present mandate the Palestine Arabs have no say whatever in the conduct of their own national or even personal affairs. They are not even consulted, however, did have an officially recognized status in Palestine and even the chief of immigration is a Jew. The only way the Arabs can be heard, and that is through revolt and students such as occurred during the wailing wall last August, and unless the present British policy is radically altered these revolts seem inevitable. The British are aware of this and they are raising the standard of life in Palestine, the delegates declare that that very thing is one of the principal causes of Arab discontent. The British are raising the standard of life at too fast a rate. By bringing me money into the

Summing up the situation of Zionist colonization in Palestine, one of the speakers said:

"It's like a house. You own it and someone tells you that you have to give your best room to someone else. Not as a guest, mind you, or even as a paying boarder. You did not ask him in—but there he is. Would you permit it? The truth is that there is not one Arab farmer in all Palestine who wants the Jew out. Under other conditions, yes, but as self-invited occupants we do not want them in our house."

All that a player need know is that opponents will not be able to hold the trick-tracks, and hence, that the deal is line, beyond which it is, as a rule, impossible to develop the trick-track. The possibilities of twenty-six cards at a suit are ten.

The following three paragraphs, taken from one of my books, state clearly and give the reasons for the relative game-going value of the various declarations.

THE TRICK-TRACK SUITS If combined hands of a suit and partner can make a given number of tricks at No Trumps, they can make as a rule at least one, usually several, at the same suit. This is true up to but not beyond ten tricks.

The Romantic Prince

By RAFAEL SABATINI

(Copyright, 1930, by North American Newspaper Alliance and Metropolitan Newspaper Service.)

In a chamber sparsely furnished, the hearth cold and empty and the square window barred like a prison's, sat the King of France. A knock fell upon the door. The King jumped. His nerves were in an excruciating case. A page entered to say that the Duke, accompanied by Count Anthony of Guelders, begged an audience.

The keen eager eyes of the King flickered at the announcement, and a measure of relieved surprise showed in his face. If Count Anthony of Guelders was in this, his case must be far from hopeless. Count Anthony, that mirror of chivalry and pattern of honor, did not deal in murder or baseness of any kind. He rose and nodded his consent.

First came the groom of the chamber bearing a great gilded candle branch of a dozen candles, whose golden light suffused the bleak room almost with a sense of warmth. Then the Duke entered, followed closely by his cousin.

In the presence of the King, Charles of Burgundy, although silent of face, would have bent his knee in formal homage, but that Louis, springing forward, prevented him by seizing his elbows and upholding him.

"Fair cousin, this is to honor me. And you, my Lord Count, I bid you welcome. He removed a hand from the Duke's sleeve, to extend it to Count Anthony, who dutifully kissed it while he bent his knee. "You find me in deep distress," he ran on, "at the events which have come to trouble the harmony I had hoped should prevail between us here. It was that hope, that confident hope which made me anxious to come in person to adjust our differences under the surety of your safe conduct."

The Duke began to rumble an answer. "Monseigneur, but for that safe conduct..."

Fearing imprudences from the Duke, Count Anthony made haste to assume the spokesmanship.

"Sire, His Highness has ventured to intrude upon you in the hope that it may be your good pleasure to fulfill now the purpose of your visit to Peronne."

His tone and words were of the utmost deference. So much, indeed, that they made the King suspicious of their ultimate intention. He flicked his coarse lips, and his quick little eyes flashed from one to the other of them.

"Why, this a good hearing," said he. "Excellent hearing. I feared that the discussions of terms might have been indefinitely postponed by these unfortunate events which..."

While he fumbled for euphemistic expressions, the Duke cut in harshly. "There was good reason for your fears, monseigneur. These events cry out for satisfaction."

Count Anthony broke in sharply. "By your leave, Charles! His glance said more than his words, and it was not lost on the watchful monarch. With gracious deference he turned to the King again. "You perceive, sire, that an obstacle exists to the calm discussion of any terms of peace between France and Burgundy, however deeply desired by both. But if I have brought the Duke here to consider them with you, monseigneur, it is in the very confident hope that in spite of the reports His Highness has received, you will, yourself, sire, be able to remove the obstacle."

The King considered. "God and Our Lady know I have the will. As for the ability... Will your Lordship tell me the extent of these reports? It is said the Prince-Bishop has been murdered and with him the Burgundian Lieutenant and the Papal Legate. That may be true. It is not at all surprising. The people of Liege have never shown any love for Louis Bourbon. Also it is known that they did not willingly submit to the Burgundian yoke which was imposed upon them. People do not always understand what may ultimately be for their own good, and the illusion which they call liberty commonly leads to extravagant excesses. Knowing the Duke of Burgundy engaged upon my frontiers, it is not surprising that they should have deemed the occasion opportune for the revolt they will have been meditating ever since they were brought into Burgundian subjection. I conceive and understand my cousin's indignation. I share it even. But for what am I in all this? How is it reported, how assumed, that I am concerned in events in distant Liege?"

"It is not assumed," the Duke rasped. "There is evidence of it. We know now of the activity of your agents. Officers of your own, soldiers of experience such as Fremont de Marle, des Aubus, du Breuil, and the Grandison were seen to be leading the insurrectionaries."

"Who says so?" snapped the King. "My messengers, gentlemen of my own who have ridden in from Liege. Shall I send for them to tell you, themselves, sire, what they witnessed?"

Count Anthony cut in smoothly. "But where is the need for that? The King himself is here, and can speak to it. His royal word cannot be held in doubt."

Thus Count Anthony opened a door of escape the door of falsehood. And the King, never dreaming whither that door would lead him, bolted through it.

"I thank you, Lord Count," he said, with dignity, "for hesitating to believe that the King of France is a knave. I shall hope to remember it to your advantage, my lord. If ever it should be my good fortune to have occasion to do so as for these men of mine who are implicated, three of them are men of mine no longer; they ceased to be men of mine in the last half year. As for Grandison, he is to the best of my belief in Paris at this moment. So that in respect of him, at least, your report is inaccurate. If inaccurate in respect of him, why should it be accurate in respect of the others, even if they were men of mine, which I say again they are not."

"You have not proved it, sire," said the Duke, uncompromisingly. "Charles, Charles!" Count Anthony admonished him. "His Highness has indeed proved it by stating the contrary upon his kingly word. Or, if the statement as it stands is insufficient, he will, I am sure, graciously condescend to amplify it."

"I do," the King assented quickly. "When those men quitted my service, I had no knowledge of, or concern in their intentions. I disavow them entirely in whatever they may have done in Liege."

"You hear, Charles!" cried Count Anthony in a tone of one who says, "What did I tell you?" But the Count had not done yet. He meant to truss the King intricately in his own falsehoods.

"It only remains, sire, completely to disabuse the mind of His Highness by informing him with your own lips of what I am persuaded must be true, that not by the hands of the men named or by any other hands, or in any way have you had part or share in the insurrection at Liege."

Unhesitatingly the King answered with the full lie required. "I do so inform him. Is that enough?"

Count Anthony fetched a deep sigh. "More than enough for me, who could never have supposed a king's honor to have permitted such knavery as a breach of the treaties existing between France and Burgundy. But, sire, you have enemies, and they have poured their poison into the ear of your cousin. Look at him, sire. Read the unbelief in his countenance. If you could afford him evidence of what you say, the Count continued."

"Evidence? What evidence have I? Louis got to his feet. "What better evidence than my word?"

"What better, indeed! And yet you see what a barrier this thing must present to any discussion of the terms of peace."

The King saw that, and more. He saw the danger in which his own neck stood, which was more to him at the moment than the danger of the treaty. He began to fear that he had perjured himself in vain. And then the Count came again to his assistance, opening yet another door, but this time one through which he must pass without any eagerness: the door to which the earlier lies of which he had so indolently been led to avail himself had naturally brought him.

"You said earlier, sire, that you share the Duke's indignation at the affair at Liege?"

"I did say so," the King protested eagerly. "Ah!" Count Anthony's face lighted. His next words surprised both the King and the Duke, for it showed them into what a trap he had manoeuvred the crafty Louis.

"I rejoice to hear you, sire. For of this, at least, you will have no difficulty in giving a proof that will satisfy His Highness. And in proving this, you prove the rest. Signify this indignation by joining hands with the Duke in punishing the insurrection. Bring up a portion of your forces, and in company with the Duke march to Liege and lend your aid in compelling the Liegeois to return to their allegiance to His Highness. Consent to that, sire, and you give the lie to all your defamers here. Further, you will have removed the last obstacle to the discussion of the peace between Burgundy and France."

Livid the King stood and looked at Count Anthony; and if ever hatred looked out of mortal eyes it looked then out of his. He was trapped, caught, tangled in his own falsehood beyond all possibility of extrication. He must do as was required of him or else brand himself as a perjured liar.

He bowed his head. "Yes," he assented. "I will do that to prove my good faith." And he sank limply down into his chair.

The terms of the treaty of peace were soon agreed. The King was in no condition after that for any finesse, and Burgundy obtained from him the sureties he required to conclude a peace satisfactory to herself.

Kettle Valley Railway Will Be Improved

VANCOUVER, April 3.—Construction and improvement work costing more than $1,000,000 will be undertaken on the Kettle Valley Railway line this season, it is announced by D. C. Coleman, president of the Kettle Valley line.

See MARION NIXON'S Kissproof Lips

—in Warner Bros' "Show of Shows." "Say, I With The Kissproof," and "In The Headlines."

Of Course I Use Lipstick—but only once a day!

—Marion Nixon, radiant film star, frankly admitted.

"But I won't be annoyed with a lipstick that keeps coming off. That's why I'm so strong for Kissproof. When I put it on my lips of morning, I'm through with them. I know Kissproof will keep them looking their best all day."

Miss Nixon is just another of the Hollywood stars who have found Kissproof—the waterproof lipstick—to be one that combines immediate with lasting charm, subtle sophistication with natural beauty. At all toilet counters.
